

Why is TransLink doing business with a company complicit in war crimes?

A recent article by Vancouver writer Chris Spanos revealed that a Canadian company, SNC-Lavalin Group, is supplying bullets to U.S. Occupation forces in Iraq.

SNC-Lavalin has offices in Vancouver and is one of the contractors bidding on the RAV rapid transit line being built by TransLink.

A recent report in the Lancet medical journal concludes that there has been an excess of 100,000 civilian deaths in Iraq since the U.S. invasion. The report's author stated that "Most individuals reportedly killed by coalition forces were women and children." It appears that SNC - Lavalin's bullets will be used to continue these blatant violations of international law.

Get involved – see other side

Why is TransLink doing business with a company complicit in war crimes?

A recent article by Vancouver writer Chris Spanos revealed that a Canadian company, SNC-Lavalin Group, is supplying bullets to U.S. Occupation forces in Iraq.

SNC-Lavalin has offices in Vancouver and is one of the contractors bidding on the RAV rapid transit line being built by TransLink.

A recent report in the Lancet medical journal concludes that there has been an excess of 100,000 civilian deaths in Iraq since the U.S. invasion. The report's author stated that "Most individuals reportedly killed by coalition forces were women and children." It appears that SNC - Lavalin's bullets will be used to continue these blatant violations of international law.

Get involved – see other side

Why is TransLink doing business with a company complicit in war crimes?

A recent article by Vancouver writer Chris Spanos revealed that a Canadian company, SNC-Lavalin Group, is supplying bullets to U.S. Occupation forces in Iraq.

SNC-Lavalin has offices in Vancouver and is one of the contractors bidding on the RAV rapid transit line being built by TransLink.

A recent report in the Lancet medical journal concludes that there has been an excess of 100,000 civilian deaths in Iraq since the U.S. invasion. The report's author stated that "Most individuals reportedly killed by coalition forces were women and children." It appears that SNC - Lavalin's bullets will be used to continue these blatant violations of international law.

Get involved – see other side

Why is TransLink doing business with a company complicit in war crimes?

A recent article by Vancouver writer Chris Spanos revealed that a Canadian company, SNC-Lavalin Group, is supplying bullets to U.S. Occupation forces in Iraq.

SNC-Lavalin has offices in Vancouver and is one of the contractors bidding on the RAV rapid transit line being built by TransLink.

A recent report in the Lancet medical journal concludes that there has been an excess of 100,000 civilian deaths in Iraq since the U.S. invasion. The report's author stated that "Most individuals reportedly killed by coalition forces were women and children." It appears that SNC - Lavalin's bullets will be used to continue these blatant violations of international law.

Get involved – see other side

more info at
www.EcoCascadia.org

To become involved in the Vancouver campaign against SNC-Lavalin email: cascadiac@yahoo.com

You can voice your concerns to SNC-Lavalin at:
info@snclavalin.com

more info at
www.EcoCascadia.org

To become involved in the Vancouver campaign against SNC-Lavalin email: cascadiac@yahoo.com

You can voice your concerns to SNC-Lavalin at:
info@snclavalin.com

more info at
www.EcoCascadia.org

To become involved in the Vancouver campaign against SNC-Lavalin email: cascadiac@yahoo.com

You can voice your concerns to SNC-Lavalin at:
info@snclavalin.com

more info at
www.EcoCascadia.org

To become involved in the Vancouver campaign against SNC-Lavalin email: cascadiac@yahoo.com

You can voice your concerns to SNC-Lavalin at:
info@snclavalin.com